

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A photo-taking apparatus includes a control switch, a laser module controlled by the control switch to generate a laser beam for producing a light frame around the field to be photographed, a shutter controlled by the control switch means to expose a film to the light of the view of the field to be photographed, and a processor controlled by the control switch means to control the operation of the laser module and the shutter for producing a light frame and taking photos.

10